

The Woodward Center

A. Historical

The Woodward Center is the Westfield State College's state of the art Athletic facility build in 2004 and named in honor of the departing President, Fredrick Woodward. This building contains both a field house for practice and competition of various sports, as well as a venue for various social and community events. The adjacent fields also provide a top rated site for competition in a host of college sports, and local teams utilizing the Westfield State campus from time to time. Classrooms for Movement Science courses are an integral part of this facility with Training and Fitness rooms, lab and conference areas to complete the program.
